St. Margaret Hospital opened its doors in October, 1910. Five months later – on Monday, March 27, 1911 – the first meeting of the Women’s Auxiliary Board was held in the nurses’ parlor of the hospital. Consisting of wives, sisters, and friends of the trustees, and given the mission by them to oversee the supervision of the hospital, the Auxiliary, from its beginning, was an essential part of St. Margaret Hospital.

The early members supervised the nursing students, arranged for housekeeping and interior decoration, visited patients, provided holiday decorations, and maintained the chapel.

During the years that followed, this group established the volunteer program, founded and operated the ‘Lifeline’ program, supported the nursing school, and provided artwork, furnishings, and holiday decorations for the hospital. The Auxiliary maintains the chapel and sponsors regular worship services which are televised throughout the hospital. The chapel has been beautified by needle-point kneelers made by Auxiliary members and by the installation of the stained glass windows which were rescued during the demolition of the Lawrenceville hospital building.

In the late 1990s, the Women’s Auxiliary Board was renamed the Auxiliary of St. Margaret Foundation. The work of the original members continues with current renovations to the ICU waiting room, and support of the planned Patient/Family Resource Pavilion.

Thank you for attending the 100th Anniversary Celebration. Your support will mean the Auxiliary of St. Margaret Foundation will be able to continue the mission of our founding members into the future.
